

Spring 2021

COLLOQUIUM SERIES

The Psychology Department is pleased to announce:

Introductory remarks by Matthew Grilli

100 Years of Neuropsychology: Implications for Brain Health Equity Today

Monica Rivera-Mindt, Ph.D., ABPP

Department of Psychology, Fordham University

Friday, May 7th, 2021

3:00 p.m. MST

<https://arizona.zoom.us/j/82871800093>

This presentation will provide a critical sociohistorical analysis of the field of neuropsychology over the last century. The aims include highlight current brain health disparities, addressing vital and often overlooked demographic considerations as well as the sociocultural mechanisms of cognitive test performance, and finally, proposing a framework to move neuropsychology forward today.

With questions about access or to request any disability-related accommodations for this talk, please contact Vanessa Noonkester, vnoonkester@email.arizona.edu